D. Macpherson

Story

Donald Macpherson joined the Scottish Horse in August 1914 and fought in Gallipoli, where contracted malaria and dysentery. He came home to recuperate but volunteered for further oversea service. He was sent to Salonica where he distinguished himself as a scout leader and was mentioned in despatches. In 1918 he landed in France with his Battalion. His brother-in-law, writing home, thus described his death:
 "We were going up to take over the front line when we were heavily shelled. Headquarters Company stopped, and as we passed Donald gave me a 'cheerio', but just five minutes later a shell landed amongst them, killing Donald and the Adjutant."
